Iraqi nurse success story

A story of ambition and success

Iraq Baghdad, 15.11.2022, 14:42 Time

USPA NEWS - Many of us hear of creative people in their field

They develop and make their journey an influential imprint on the lives of others. But have you heard that you can be the therapist and the patient at the same time? Yes, this is what happened with the 27-year-old nurse, Nawras Ali.

A graduate of a medical institute and a social researcher certificate.

She fell in love with the medical profession, and his plan made great strides towards achieving her goal.

She received a certificate of appreciation from the identity centre and thanks and appreciation from the health department for her efforts in the field of her work. Most patients with kidney failure know and praise her and for her kindness in dealing with them. She draws a smile on the faces of patients while she treats them and relieves them of a lot. She does not care about fatigue and stress.

The important thing is that she is keen on patient safety help them

Not only did her support for kidney failure patients stop, but she went beyond that to her

Participated in several campaigns for children with cancer with the childhood ambassador team, Dr. Zeina Al-Qarghali, awareness campaigns, and other campaigns for quitting smoking and drugs for university students with the Identity Centre, in addition to providing food baskets for orphans, and participated in the largest complementary medicine conference in the Middle East to get the surprise later when she contracted the same disease with which she used to treat patients, to turn her life into a real nightmare and live the same suffering, but she did not stop and give in to despair. On the contrary, most of her thinking became the patients.

And how to strive to relieve them, introduce their suffering, and provide some of the medicines they need during hemodialysis, especially since most of them are from the poor class who do not even have a transportation fee to go to the hospital.

Her ambition and wish today is to find better ways to treat the disease to rid them of the suffering they are experiencing.

And you will strive for this and inspire many patients to introduce the patient's step and how to prevent it.

wisdom in life,

Experiences are the essence of life without experiences, man will not be aware of his mistakes
